Tropical Hurricane Slows Down

CITRUS CROPS
LASHED BY WIND
ACROSS FLORIDANo Casualties Reported Yet
As Storm Moves North;
Coast Alerted

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 8.—A tropical storm which howled across central Florida's rich citrus belt during the night was swirling with diminished force northward into Georgia today.

The weather bureau said the storm would move over Georgia and South Carolina today and tonight, constantly losing strength but causing high tides on the Atlantic coast.

Storm warnings were extended as far as Atlantic City, N. J.

This morning the storm center was located a short distance inland from Jacksonville, moving north-northeastward at 30 to 35 miles an hour. It had struck inland at Tampa from the Gulf of Mexico shortly after midnight, causing some damage. Radio station WLAK at Sarasota was off the air for three hours because of power failure caused by the winds.

The latest advisory said it appeared the storm would remain inland. Gale winds near the center will moderate gradually, but squally winds still threaten on the coast.

Winds as high as 35 to 45 miles an hour could be expected as far north as Atlantic City, the weather bureau said.

The center of the storm was speeding across Florida at 25 to 30 miles an hour, and winds of gale force battered the citrus belt, lashing at heavily laden trees.

Until the fading of the winds could be regarded as positive, hurricane warnings were maintained along the lower gulf coast of Florida and a portion of the east coast. Storm warnings were up from Fernandina, Fla., to Atlantic City, and small craft warnings south of Block Island, R. I., to Atlantic City.

During the night the storm center passed inland south of Tampa, from the gulf where it reached its greatest intensity yesterday, and brought gale winds over the center of the state. Only minor damage was reported from the west coast, and no casualties. Estimates of (Continued on Page Two)

TROUBLE FEARED
AMONG KOREANS
ON ANNIVERSARY

SEOUL, Korea, Oct. 8.—All U. S. Army and civilian personnel throughout South Korea were ordered to stay indoors after 10 p. m. tonight as military authorities anticipated an outbreak of extremist disorders on the Han-Kul anniversary.

The anniversary celebrates the introduction of the present-day Korean alphabet 500 years ago and presumably might spur extremists protesting the occupation of Korea by foreign powers to demonstrations.

An authoritative Army source said there was reason to believe that the extremists might carry out a program that includes burning U. S. Army installations, raiding the homes of Korean rightist leaders and freeing political prisoners from jails.

It was learned that the U. S. Army was placing military guards around the homes of Dr. Kim Kiusik, rightist leader, and another unidentified rightist.

LIQUOR FIGHT
EXPECTED HERELiquor Store To Be Open
During Pumpkin Show;
Closing Order Stands

Dispute over the police ban on the sale of liquor and six per cent beer during next week's four-day 40th annual Pumpkin Show loomed Tuesday.

With the disclosure that some of Circleville's tavern operators have indicated a determination to continue such sales during the Pumpkin Show despite the closing order, the revelation that the state-owned liquor store at 108 East Franklin street will continue operations.

Amos Palm, manager of the State Liquor Store, said he had received instructions from the Ohio Department of Liquor Control to observe regular business hours Wednesday through Friday, Oct. 16-19, during the Pumpkin Show. The regular daily business hours at the State Liquor Store, he said, are from 11 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Police Chief William F. McCrady said Tuesday there was "no change" in his official order, issued Sept. 9, banning sales of liquor and six per cent beer during the Pickaway County Fair and the Pumpkin Show. The sales were halted during the County Fair which was held Sept. 11-14.

The order, which was issued by Chief McCrady following a conference with Mayor Ben H. Gordon, was based on Ohio's 58-year-old law which prohibits sales of intoxicants within a two-mile radius of an agricultural fair or exposition. Liquor dealers in Circleville pointed out Tuesday that sales of liquor were permitted and that the State Liquor Store continued operations during the recent Apple Festival at Jackson.

Mayor Gordon could not be reached Tuesday for a statement relative to the Circleville situation.

LAUSCHE ASKS
JURY PROBE OF
GAMBLING HOUSE

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8.—A grand jury investigation of "a commercial racketeering gambling house" near Grove City was requested last yesterday by Gov. Frank J. Lausche.

Lausche requested County Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett to call before the grand jury Gus Campbell, Columbus, who several days ago reported he had been robbed during a holdup at the house.

The governor also instructed Sheriff Jacob E. Sandusky to give Bartlett "the fullest aid to bring before the bar of justice the persons who operated the place in which the robbery occurred."

Forty patrons were reported robbed of between $30,000 and $35,000 last Wednesday.

Frank Lynch, Retired
Businessman, Dies In Home Following Stroke

Francis Aloysius Lynch, 68, lifelong Circleville citizen and one of the most widely known residents of Pickaway county, died at 9 p. m. Monday in his home, 411 South Court street. He had been ill about three and one-half years.

Prior to his retirement a little less than a year ago, Mr. Lynch, known popularly among his wide circle of friends as Frank, was engaged in the soft drink business in Circleville for 40 years.

He was born Nov. 2, 1877 in Circleville, the son of Matthew Lynch and Catherine Hirt Lynch. He was married June 19, 1906 to Bess Sapp, who preceded him in death.

Mr. Lynch, long active in fraternal, social, civic, and commercial affairs of the community, was a member of St. Joseph's Catholic church, Rotary club, Elks' lodge, and Pickaway Country club. He had served as a city councilman and a Pumpkin Show Society director.

He was a leader in a movement several years ago to establish a city park in Circleville and worked hard to secure the site which is now Ted Lewis park. A baseball player in his youth, Mr. Lynch retained his interest in sports throughout his life and was one of the community's greatest boosters for athletics.

In November, 1945 Mr. Lynch sold the Circleville Coca Cola Bottling company to the Coca Cola Bottling Company, Columbus. It was soon after the turn of the century that Mr. Lynch resigned his position with the local power company and, with John Dodd as partner, bought the bottling business which had been conducted by John D. Kernah. The partners were without funds except $1,250 borrowed from the Third National bank. It was a tiny establishment and it soon was obvious that it could not support two owners, so Mr. Lynch bought his partner's interest.

All operations in the original plant were by hand except for power provided by an old horse that did double duty in deliveries. The capacity production was 30 cases of soft drink per day. Five years elapsed before conditions permitted expansion. Then five gross of patent-cap bottles were added. The bottles were washed by hand in a $4.50 wooden trough. The washing equipment in the plant when Mr. Lynch sold out was inadequate. (Continued on Page Two)

REMAINS SAMEPittsburgh Power Strike In
15th Day; Ship Union
Threatens Walkout

By United Press

Strikes continued with little sign of settlement in the film, power and transit industries today, and government labor officials doubled efforts to end the nationwide shipping tie-up in the face of a union threat to walk out on negotiations.

Capt. Harry Martin, president of the Masters, Mates and Pilots (AFL), delivered his threat to leave the conference table as government-sponsored sessions went into the second week.

Martin announced that if no agreement is reached by tomorrow, his union would revert to original demands which included a 30 per cent wage boost.

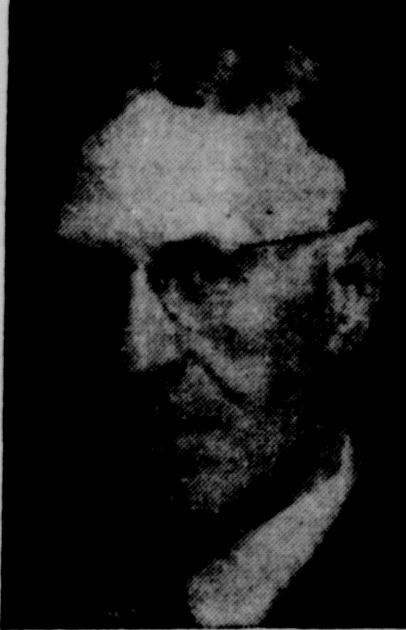

In other major labor developments:

1. Pittsburgh's devastating power strike passed into its 15th day still hopelessly deadlocked, and company officials turned down a new union proposal.

2. Union milk drivers and dairy workers in St. Paul, Minn., returned to work on their regular shifts, ending the city's milk strike before it was barely 24-hours old.

3. Hollywood motion picture actors and bit players voted better than five to one to cross picket lines in the film city's latest jurisdictional dispute.

4. The relatively minor issue of whether CIO longshoremen or AFL sailors would unload one batch on 16 lumber schooners threatened to prolong the west coast maritime strike indefinitely.

TRUCE PROPOSALMarshall And Stuart Report
Chinese Communists Turn Down Bid For Peace

NANKING, Oct. 8.—Gen. George C. Marshall, special American peace envoy, and U. S. Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart issued a joint statement today announcing that Communist headquarters had rejected the American proposal for a 10-day truce in China's burgeoning civil war.

A joint American statement said the Communist reply was delivered verbally by Communist spokesman Wang Ping-Nan, and that chief Communist negotiator Chou En-Lai had refused to return to Nanking for a resumption of peace negotiations.

Wang told Marshall and Stuart that any such truce "should be without a time limit." He said "previous experience" had taught the Communists that limited truce agreements were unsatisfactory. "The proposal would seem to be a nationalistic strategic move unless government troops are withdrawn from their original positions," Wang said.

The Communist spokesman said his group would consent to join discussions of the "committee of five" and the "committee of three," but that subjects should not be limited to Chiang Kai-shek. (Continued on Page Two)

COTTON KNITTED
CLOTHES TO GO
UP 30 PERCENT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The OPA warned consumers today to look for a 30 per cent increase soon in the price of certain cotton knitted wear.

At the same time, the agency said retail prices on certain brands of soap soon may go up a little, but that no overall soap price boost is contemplated.

Among the cotton items affected are polo shirts, tee shirts, children's two-piece cotton suits, cotton sweaters and creepers, knitted pants and overalls. The increase is being granted manufacturers to encourage the production of items identical with those made in 1942.

The OPA said it is granting a number of individual price adjustments to manufacturers of household soap and cleaners to compensate for higher costs. In most cases, it said, this will mean little or no increase in consumer prices.

Price Controls

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Sen. Theodore Francis Green, D., R. I., called on the government today to seize the meat stocks of packing houses to determine whether packers are hoarding the meat the public is doing without.

Asserting that packers seem to be guilty of a "strike against the public," he also recommended that the justice department look into the possibility of anti-trust proceedings against the major packing firms.

Green's demand came as the OPA meat industry advisory committee met to decide whether it will ask Secretary of Agriculture Clinton B. Anderson to remove price controls from meat.

OPA sources said a majority of the committee favors decontrol. If it makes such a request, Anderson must pass on it within 15 days. If he does not approve it—and administration policy opposes decontrol—the committee may request a hearing which must be granted within 10 days. If the answer still is "no," the group may appeal to the price decontrol board.

Green charged that major packing companies are hoping the meat famine "will break the OPA." He said the government has authority to seize their stocks and to "punish any who are guilty of a crime against society."

BRITISH READY TO LEND MEAT
TO U. S. ARMY

LONDON, Oct. 8.—A food ministry spokesman said today that the British government was prepared to lend the United States armed forces in Europe 20,000,000 pounds of meat to offset the present emergency "providing certain conditions now under review are agreed on."

Negotiations for the meat now are under way in Washington and were expected to conclude today or tomorrow, it was understood.

The British food ministry in Washington reportedly has asked the U. S. department of agriculture for assurances that the borrowed meat will be replaced within a short time. It was understood the guarantee was being sought to prevent any deprivation of the strictly rationed British public.

Washington correspondents of British morning newspapers reported that meat stocks of American occupation forces were "dangerously low." The Daily Telegraph correspondent said the shortage resulted from the "almost total disappearance of meat from markets" in the United States.

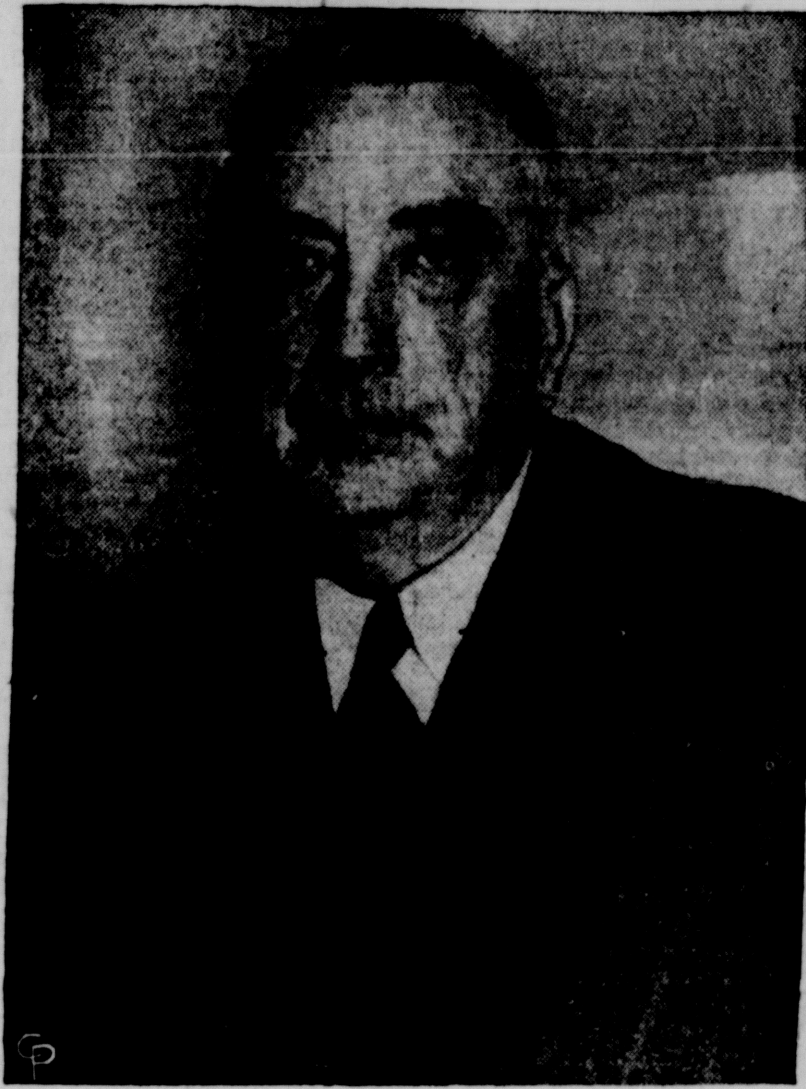

The Telegraph said the British mission had "made it clear that the amount can only be made available if it involves no deprivation by the people of Britain, and if guarantees of replacement are given."

GOVERNMENT MUST PAY
PACKERS THEIR COSTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The U. S. court of claims has ruled that packers must be paid the replacement cost of government requisitioned meat even though it may exceed the OPA price ceiling. The tribunal yesterday awarded a judgment of $17,736 to John J. Fein & Co., a Philadelphia packing firm, from whom the government had requisitioned 225,000 pounds of lard and pork products in 1943.

The government offered compensation based on OPA ceilings. The company refused to accept it, contending that it cost more to replace the requisitioned stocks.

Top Nazis Unhappy As They Await Hangings

NUERNBERG, Oct. 8.—Hermann Goering burst into a fit of weeping when he decided to remove pictures of his wife and daughter from his cell, a U. S. Army officer revealed today, but none of the condemned Nazis has shown any sign of collapse.

The Army lifted a corner of the curtain of secrecy over the Nuernberg prison where the Nazi war criminals were waiting out their last eight days. The glimpse inside the "death row" showed some of them jittery and distraught but all keeping themselves under control.

On orders from Berlin prison officials began a series of two daily press conferences. The first dealt largely with dispelling loose rumors, and giving fragments of information on the prisoners. Maj. Frederick Teich of Newington, Conn., officer of the internal security detachment since the war crimes trial began, presided at the first conference. He was flanked by public relations officers.

Taking up a sheet of questions, he disposed of the bulk of them with negatives. No details of the executions were available. He did not know who the hangman would be. Master Sgt. John C. Woods, a likely candidate, is not listed at present on the prison staff. No apparatus for the executions is in the prison. Physical preparations have not yet begun.

Disclosing for the first time that there had been no breakdowns or collapses among the condemned men, Teich said Goering after a spell of brooding came to a decision to get the pictures of his wife and daughter out of his cell. He put them in an envelope and sent them to his lawyer. Then he blubbered like a small boy from whose hand a treasure had been snatched. But Goering maintained his poise (Continued on Page Two)

COUNCIL WILL STUDY APPEALSFinal Fate Of Convicted
Nazis To Be Settled
At Wednesday Meet

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—The fate of 16 Nazi leaders convicted at Nuernberg will be decided tomorrow when the Allied control council considers their appeals in the same room where the Nazi people's court dealt out death sentences to scores of Germans in the 1944 Hitler bomb plot.

Allied sources close to the council said they saw "little chance" of clemency for any of the 16 particularly the 11 who appealed their death sentences.

General Joseph Pierre Koenig of France called a meeting of the Allied council for 11 a. m. tomorrow to review the sentences imposed a week ago by the international tribunal.

If the council rejects the appeals, as expected, Hermann Goering and the other 10 under death sentence will be hanged in Nuernberg Oct. 16. Rudolf Hess and the other six with prison sentences will be transferred to Berlin.

American military government sources expected the council to discuss the requests of Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl to be shot instead of hanged.

Whether the council has the authority to alter the manner of death penalty prescribed by the tribunal was not clear. The London charter establishing the court authorized the council to reduce punishments, but forbade it to increase the severity of sentence or change the tribunal's findings.

Fire in the kitchen of the home of Roy Smith, Maplewood avenue, was extinguished at 2:45 p. m. Monday by firemen who said the blaze was caused by the flooding of a kerosene stove. Firemen said the damage was small.

A blaze which firemen said was caused by a lighted cigarette badly damaged a front seat cushion in the parked car of Paul Decker and was extinguished by firemen at 7:30 p. m. Monday. The automobile was in front of the Roll and Bowl, Inc., 141 East Main street, of which Decker is manager.

Speeches Do Little To Bring
Agreement Of Conferees
On Peace Plans

PARIS, Oct. 8.—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, rejecting any idea of dividing the world into two blocs, appealed to the peace conference today to make unity the basis of peace as it was the basis of victory.

Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, president of the United Nations general assembly, criticized the peace conference procedure today and warned that small countries would demand a different system of peace-making with Germany and Japan.

Spaak addressed the first of today's three plenary sessions on the Italian treaty. Later in the day Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, just returned from Moscow, was to make a speech which may disclose the latest trends in Soviet policy.

The Belgian leader especially denounced the system under which the big four draft treaties first and then stand solidly against modification of them. He said this made changes by other states invited for consultation virtually impossible.

Spaak hinted he thought this conference had been merely a rubber stamp process for big four decisions already taken.

Wincenty Raymonowicz, speaking for Poland, said he felt one reason why the conference refused to approve the frontier requests Yugoslavia desired was that Yugoslavia had chosen a form of government different from that of the west.

He opposed the "French line" compromise on the Yugoslav frontier and warned that establishment of the free city of Trieste might create another "Danzig."

Premier Constantin Tsaldaris of Greece said he would press again for cession to Greece of northern Epirus from Albania. He denounced the conference decision to give Greece only $100,000,000 in reparations from Italy and said Italy was well on the way to recovery while Greece still languished in an economic crisis.

IN COLUMBUS
TROLLEY STRIKE

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 8.—Negotiations which would end the week-old Columbus public transportation strike today apparently were at the turning point.

U. S. Federal Conciliator H. J. Montoney said that negotiations had reached the near settlement stage with only several major issues remaining for decision.

"We will know whether the strike will be settled in a day or two, or whether it will last indefinitely by the end of today's session," Montoney said. "Today we will know the score."

Officials of the C. I. O. Transport Workers union and the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. held lengthy meetings daily during the strike. The negotiators apparently settled some 40 demands for improved working conditions.

One of the major issues still to be settled before a new working contract can be signed was a 30-cent hourly wage increase demand. Union negotiators rejected an eight-cent hourly increase proposed by the company.

Meanwhile the Columbus city council by a 5 to 1 vote adopted a resolution urging that "every effort be made . . . to continue negotiations so that this strike will end . . ."

POWER SAVING ASKED

WARREN, O., Oct. 8.—General Manager E. L. Franklin of the Ohio Public Service Co. today appealed to Warren's 60,000 residents to adopt a "voluntary rationing program" to conserve power during a strike of C.I.O. utility workers.

Moscow. He presumably discussed with Premier Stalin the conference developments and Soviet policy in the approaching big four and United Nations assembly meetings.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes also were listed to speak today during three plenary sessions examining the Italian treaty. Byrnes may turn over the American time to Willard Thorp, economic expert.

The plenary meeting will begin voting article by article on the Italian treaty tomorrow.

The speech-making and voting were expected to continue the split between East and West against which Field Marshal Jan C. Smuts of South Africa warned yesterday. It was uncertain whether today's speakers would stick to the Italian treaty issues or follow Smuts' example by dealing with basic big-power differences.

BRITAIN MISSES DREAMBOAT ON RECORD FLIGHT

LONDON, Oct. 8 — Britain missed the Dreamboat apparently because Col. C. S. Irvine was in a hurry and had no time for air-borne reception committees—but today the air ministry turned to the red-faced RAF for a more explicit answer.

An embarrassing postmortem revealed that an amateur radio operator contacted the Dreamboat 54 minutes before the elaborate radar installations of the RAF's fighter command.

By the time three British Mosquito fighters had reached 15,000 feet to escort the Dreamboat over the Northolt airfield—the streaking B-29 was over the English channel, approaching France.

The Daily Express asked editorially: "Why did the British miss the Dreamboat?" And the British broadcasting corporation rubbed salt into the wound by airing the amateur radio operator's conversation with the Superfortress.

As the air ministry fired angry questions at the RAF, one fighter command officer blamed the American embassy for not providing an advance warning.

TOLEDO DENIES FAMOUS KILROY IS POLICEMAN

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 8—The ubiquitous Kilroy, who signed his name in unusual places wherever American troops went during World War II, today was nearly located in Toledo—as a policeman.

A citizen phoned police that he had received a traffic ticket signed by "Patrolman Kilroy, badge No. 0," although he was parked in a perfectly legal manner.

Patrolman Joseph Galloway checked the roster and informed the motorist it was probably a joke. "We have no such man on the force. Kilroy wasn't here," he said.

Chiang's Kuomintang government reportedly had agreed to observe the 10-day truce proposed by the American representatives, but has refused to issue an overall "cease fire" order.

Wang said there had been little change in the Communist position since they asked the government to halt the drive on Kalgan or face a "total national split." He said Chou saw no reason to return to Nanking for peace talks and that the Communist negotiator would remain in Shanghai.

DEFENSE ASKS ARCHBISHOP BE FREED BY COURT

ZAGREB, Oct. 8—Archbishop Aloysius Stepinac cannot be held responsible for "crimes of the clergy" throughout Croatia, a lawyer for the Catholic primate of northwest Yugoslavia argued today in asking that he be acquitted of collaboration charges.

Ivo Politeo of the defense staff completed his case after seven days of the trial of Stepinac, one of 16 defendants in a mass trial of alleged collaborators. He attacked the generalities in the indictment and some of the prosecution's basic points. He dwelt particularly on a prosecution contention that Stepinac was guilty of all crimes of individual clergymen in Croatia.

Another defense attorney, Natko Koticic, followed with a half-hour summation. He said the evidence had not shown that Stepinac had ordered mass conversions. He asked the court for a just verdict.

The storm rapidly lost strength as it passed over land, but the winds were great enough to do severe damage to the anticipated $250,000,000 harvest of oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. The hurricane of Sept. 15, 1944, followed almost the same path and blew down millions of boxes of fruit.

$250,000 FIRE SWEEPS STORE IN PORTSMOUTH

PORTSMOUTH, O., Oct. 8—Fire of undetermined origin early today destroyed the four-story brick building occupied by Montgomery Ward & Co. here.

Manager W. D. Nichols estimated that fire damaged $200,000 worth of merchandise in the building, while fire department officials believed that $50,000 damage was done to the building, owned by the Irving Drew estate.

Portsmouth firemen, aided by companies from Sciotoville, New Boston, Minford, South Webster and Lucasville, battled for three hours before bringing the fire under control.

Firemen reported considerable smoke and water damage was done to the neighboring eight-story concrete Masonic building and a two-story frame structure.

Fire officials believed that the fire started in the basement and shot up an elevator shaft. Night-watchman Oscar Goltz discovered the fire.

The only injury reported was suffered by Luther Bolling, 33-year-old Portsmouth fireman who fell through a hole in the second floor to the ground floor. He received body bruises.

DEPUTY, SUSPECT SEEK TIRE OF STOLEN AUTO

Maley told Sheriff Charles Radcliff that he ran out of both gasoline and cash, Friday, and that he obtained gasoline from a farmer near Frankfort and left the spare tire and wheel in the farmer's possession as security. The alleged theft of the Tuesday trip was to recover the wheel and tire.

Dr. Sheets' car was stolen at Williamsport the night of Oct. 2. Sheriff Radcliff said Maley will be formally charged with auto theft within a day or two.

SOVIET PROTEST U. S. DETENTION OF AMBASSADOR

The department did not reveal contents of the note.

A Soviet embassy spokesman said the note declared that "there was tactlessness in the treatment of the ambassador by the authorities."

There were no other details.

throughout his last meeting with his wife yesterday, Teich said. Frau Goering took advantage of a revision in rules permitting the wives of the condemned one more visit with them.

Of all the convicted men, Goering generally retained the most dignity, the officer reported. He was followed closely by Konstantin Von Neurath and Wilhelm Keitel, the latter never losing his precise military poise.

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, who asked that his life imprisonment sentence be changed to death before a firing squad, was reported to be the most despondent of the prisoners, and Rudolph Hess the most indifferent.

The richest man in the jail apparently was Goering, whose capitalizing on opportunities for financial skulduggery among the Nazis was notorious. He had a 14-carat diamond ring set in platinum, two big emeralds, and some watches.

Keitel, Hans Frank, Julius Streicher and Joachim von Ribbentrop were writing or had finished their "memoirs." They were censored and passed on to defense lawyers without deletion, Teich said nothing objectionable having been found.

Of the 50 or so letters arriving daily for the Nazis, most of them crackpot, Goering was getting the most. The rabid letters were not being delivered to the condemned men, Teich said. The prisoners have entire liberty to dispatch letters of their own.

Questioned about precautions against any suicide attempts, Teich said the precautions remained the same, being so good that they could not be improved upon.

The prisoners have complained little, he said. But once they lamented that their guards were stealing souvenir items from them. They get American cigarettes, Ribbentrop and Goering get sedatives at night, but their health remains the same.

Deaths and Funerals

GEORGE STEWART
Funeral was held at 2 p. m. Tuesday in the C. E. Hill funeral home at Williamsport for George Stewart, 65, Williamsport, who died Saturday in White Cross hospital, Columbus, following an operation.

Born in Pickaway county December 13, 1880, he was the son of Aaron and Tabitha Ater Stewart. He retired in 1938 after working on the Pennsylvania railroad since 1899.

Surviving are a brother, Lee Stewart, Williamsport, and two sisters, Mrs. Rosie Duvall, Lancaster, and Mrs. Ida Felshe, Columbus.

Services were conducted by the Rev. J. H. Sudlow and burial was in Springlawn cemetery.

LOST ARTICLES HELD

Several articles of wearing apparel left at the Circleville High school athletic field by spectators at recent football games Tuesday were at police headquarters and Police Chief William F. McCrady said the owners may reclaim their belongings by calling there and identifying same. The articles include scarfs, robes, blankets, and beanies.

Indications are strong that Anderson will not approve any industry request for meat decontrol. Twice within the past week, in line with President Truman's policy, he has said he believes present ceilings are high enough to stimulate production.

Anderson's own statistical agency, the bureau of agricultural economics, disagrees. It says that while present livestock ceilings probably will not discourage production, they will not stimulate it.

Agriculture experts agree that regardless what action is taken on livestock prices, it will not draw any beef from the ranges before the November elections. Many Re-

Prizes Offered For Displays During 40th Annual Pumpkin Show

Boys and girls enrolled in Pickaway county's 12 rural schools, as well as youngsters in Circleville, and children who are members of Boy Scout troops, the Girl Scouts, Gange groups and other organizations are eligible to compete for prizes to be awarded for window displays in the 40th annual Circleville Pumpkin Show, to be held Oct. 16-19.

In making this announcement, Tuesday, the committee in charge of the window displays urged Circleville merchants and school authorities to cooperate in encouraging the boys and girls to participate in the competition.

The committee is composed of I. W. Kinsey and Frank Sosa.

Declaring that the Pumpkin Show this year will be "bigger and better than ever", Kinsey and Sosa said the window displays are sponsored by the merchants and that the following awards will be made to the winners:

Best Pumpkin Show Window—1st prize $20, 2nd prize $10, 3rd prize $5, 4th prize $2.50.

Best Artistic or Unusual Window—1st prize $20, 2nd prize $10, 3rd prize $5, 4th prize $2.50.

The rules require that each contestant make his or her own arrangements with the merchant for the display.

Judging of the windows will take place the night of Oct. 16.

DR. HISSONG IS SPEAKER FOR KIWANIS CLUB

Dr. Clyde Hissong, state superintendent of public instruction, outlined some of the work of the state department of education in a talk before members of the Kiwanis Club Monday evening in Hanley's.

Pointing to the need of organization to make a uniform setup for the state he distributed charts showing how his department is organized. Chief divisions are visual education, elementary and secondary education, vocational education, special education, school finance, teacher education and certification, school lunch and surplus property. The last two have been added recently, the school lunch department to administer federal funds to finance meals for children and the other division to obtain as much government surplus property as possible for school use.

Dr. Hissong said each of the other nine state departments had one particular aim but the education division is interested in "where man is going and whether it is worth going there".

Virgil Cress introduced Dr. Hissong.

It was announced that the annual football banquet will be held November 11 at Hanley's. Directors announced G. Guy Campbell had been chosen as secretary for 1947.

COLUMBUS WOMAN HELD FOR INVESTIGATION HERE

A 50-year-old Columbus woman, apparently demented, was placed in the Pickaway county jail Monday morning after she battled two sheriff's deputies who removed her from a Columbus-bound bus in the 400 block of South Court street. Screams of the woman caused considerable excitement in the neighborhood.

She had been staying in the home of a friend on South Court street and early Monday left the house. Later she was reported trying doors of South Court street homes and also accosting pedestrians.

Calls were placed with police and the sheriff's department. In an attempt to elude the deputies the woman hailed the bus and boarded it. The deputies removed her bodily from the bus and placed her in their car for the trip to jail. Sheriff Charles Radcliff said the case would be placed before Probate Judge Sterling M. Lamb.

MINISTERS NAME NEW OFFICERS

The Rev. Carl Wilson New President of Pickaway County Association

Pickaway County Ministerial Association met in the sanctuary of the First United Brethren church, Monday.

The Rev. L. C. Sherburne, rector of St. Philip's Episcopal parish and senior member of the association, delivered the devotional address, using St. Matthew 20:20-28 as a scriptural basis. The Rev. Mr. Sherburne suggested that there are always certain motives for a person embracing the Christian faith. Likewise, there are also determining motives for a man entering the Christian ministry. The speaker related those determining motives in his experience relative to the answering of God's call to the ministry. In closing, the Rev. Mr. Sherburne led the group in an open forum discussion on motives for entering the ministry. The various individual presentations of personal experiences leading to the ministry as a life work proved exceptionally inspirational as well as interesting.

Under the direction of the devotional leader, the group paused to pay respect and tribute to the late Rev. Carl Kennedy, former president of the association. A letter of appreciation from Mrs. Carl Kennedy, acknowledging the ministerium's expression of sympathy at the time of her bereavement, was read.

In the business session officers were elected for the coming year. The Rev. Carl L. Wilson, pastor of the First United Brethren church, was elected president. The Rev. L. C. Sherburne, was elected vice-president. The Rev. J. H. Sudlow, pastor of the Williamsport Methodist Church, was chosen secretary-treasurer. The newly elected president

NLRB WORKING ON BIG BACKLOG OF NEW DISPUTES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8—The national labor relations board, set up by congress to discourage strikes, has such a big backlog of disputes to handle that it fears workers will strike to protest processing delays.

Chairman Paul Herzog said 1,651 cases were filed during August to set an all-time high. And the trend continues upward.

Herzog said the board was hampered because congress had slashed its appropriations $500,000 and forced discharge of 215 employees, more than 20 per cent of the staff.

"This is bound to mean great delay in handling cases," he said. "We can only hope that the labor organizations will be patient and not use self-help or strikes, weapons which the (national labor relations) act was designed to discourage, until congress has had an opportunity to reconsider what funds should be made available to the NLRB for the difficult months ahead."

The board said 73 per cent of the August cases were petitions for elections on union representation. The remainder involved unfair labor practice charges.

PROBLEM OF PRODUCTION

HEADS of many industries, and of late even a few labor leaders, believe that the return to normal production in all lines can come only with increased productivity of the workers themselves.

This productivity is down 20 per cent from pre-war standards, and for several years before the war was becoming steadily lower. Employers place the blame on the workers themselves, and on some union officials, who set a goal for achievement and see that no worker passes it. The standard set is low enough for the least efficient worker to maintain, and the faster, abler man is held down to it.

The typical American workman of a bygone day had great pride in the quality of his work and in the amount he could turn out in a day. His frequent rise to the top in industry was the result of this attitude. With achievement held down to a dead level and seniority alone the basis for promotion, production is obviously no concern of the workman.

Only when the rank and file of industrial workers come to see the relationship between the products they are anxious to purchase and their own workrate can this condition be corrected.

NO CONSERVATIVE TREND

IF there is a trend to conservatism, Australia does not show it. The election returns the Labor party to power by a majority little, if at all, less than that received in their overwhelming victory in 1943. This is the first time in Australian history that Labor has won two elections in succession.

The opposition of late years has been a fusion of two parties, the Liberals and the Country party. Their joint promise to reduce taxes by 20 per cent evidently won little support, for the Australians did not see how it was possible at one and the same time to reduce taxes and check inflation.

One particularly important result of the election is that it means the retention in office of Herbert V. Evatt, the plainspoken Minister of Foreign Affairs whose forthrightness has been a conspicuous feature of the United Nation Security Council.

PRACTICAL SENSE

HENRY Ford II labelled as a "political phony" the C. I. O. auto workers' advocacy of a guaranteed annual wage. "The term suggests someone is in a position to assure such an income, and is merely refusing to do so," said Mr. Ford. He believes the American worker wants, instead, steady employment at a fair rate of pay. This can come about only if labor and management join hands for full production. The result would be not only jobs and regular income, but a price reduction making workers' pay go farther.

This sounds not only like good economics, but good sense.

With Jack Gaver Along Broadway

NEW YORK, Oct. 8—The inside deals that go into the selection and backing of plays for Broadway are often more interesting than the plays themselves. Here is a factual account of such an effort. The names have been deleted since the show will not be presented until later in the season.

The producer is a young fellow who felt he had the proper contacts to raise money and began looking around for a script. A friend of his had a comedy which was produced experimentally in Hollywood nine years ago.

The producer and a few of his prospective backers liked the script but realized that revision was necessary. The play had been written in collaboration and the collaborator was 3,000 miles away on the west coast. The money men were cool toward the proposal that they advance enough money for the co-authors to get together and work. Then the producer discovered that his author also had another comedy, and it developed that he liked this one even better than the first one. There was no unusual revision problem involved, so producer and author went to the office of the dramatists' guild and signed contracts. This "buying" of the play actually is simply taking an option on it. The producer gets control of it for 12 months by payment of $100 monthly for the first six months and $150 monthly for the last six. As soon as it is produced, of course, these option payments stop.

One of the producer's friends thought the play had a good chance, but refused to invest because he didn't fancy that type of play. Several others expressed satisfaction and then a corner of the roof fell in on Wall Street. The producer's friends were involved and decided to forego play-backing for the moment.

Then the producer interested one of the larger film companies in the possibility of a pre-production deal, whereby the film rights are acquired by a down payment and future percentage payments after the play gets on Broadway. A second film company got wind of this and wanted to see the script for the same reason. Those things usually are worked by the film companies bidding against each other. Meanwhile, the producer had acquired some money and then found a woman in the advertising business who has invested in several shows. She pledged to raise the balance needed if she could be billed as co-producer. The arrangement was made. Then an elderly stage carpenter, who knew the producer and author, showed up to buy a piece of the show. It seems he is one of those frugal souls who has yet to lose a penny in a chewing gum dispenser.

Now all the producer has to do is to wait a month or so to see if the one actor he needs for the lead is going to be available. If he gets him, then all he has to worry about is getting a theater.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8—The Nuernberg chief prosecutor Justice Jackson is internationally proclaiming the trial made a new world law—the principle that the planning, preparing, initiating or waging of aggressive wars has become a crime punishable by death. This man who made the law considers it a hopeful sign for the peace of the world.

This is somewhat a delusion. Actually about all that Justice Jackson did was to make it a crime to lose a war.

If the aggressor wins the next war, he can hardly be expected to hang himself for his violation. If he loses, he will run the risk of hanging, but this has been true for many thousands of years, especially among the least civilized people. The more savage, less cultured or unchristian races have seldom in history taken top prisoners, and leaders of losing armies and states have not infrequently committed suicide to save themselves such a fate—although in American wars these practices have never been followed.

Whether any future aggressors can be deterred to peace by fear of hanging if they lose is a hope which is thin. Any person willing to risk life in war or revolution could only be mentally unsound if he feared the rope more than the bullet.

For that reason alone, the Nuernberg verdicts created little comment in or out of official life here. I think the common reaction was one of mild distaste, but no one chose to say why. No sympathy for any of the defendants existed anywhere. The only one of the entire batch who had any sense is Hjalmar Schacht, the Reichsbank president and financial genius. Schacht contrived the financial stratagems which led to Hitler's early economic successes—such devices as arbitrary maintenance of the internal value of money while selling it restrainedly and for selfish purposes outside, and otherwise keeping a bankrupt nation afloat. The Hitler financial setup was his, but when the fuhrer went to war, the inside story was told here that Schacht saw the government could no longer hope to succeed, married a young woman and busied himself with personal affairs far from the Reichsbank. He was released because he was never in "The Herren club" and frankly his connection with war guilt was not directly established.

Von Papen is a man of great personal influence in Germany. The list of his relatives is the list of the board of directors of German industry. His escape will greatly strengthen American prestige, but a point may have been stretched for him by the judges.

The third defendant who was released, Fritzsche, is not known by most authorities here in any personal way, and his slip from the wheels of justice is attributed to lack of evidence that he knew anything about anything, except his wheezing propaganda.

As far as public print goes, a number of persons shared the Russian chagrin that even these three should have escaped punishment. But the tribunal, in its broken decision, certainly disproved any suspicion that it was activated purely in vengeance without justice, or was creating some new and peculiar kind of justice such as was measured out to the cruel Jap General Yamashita by our own Army court-martial.

Symptoms of Lung Cancer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IT is a grim fact and one worthy of attention that at least 15,000 people in the United States die each year of cancer of the lung. Men are more often afflicted than women and for them, the lung would appear to be the second most common location for cancer, only the stomach being a more frequent site of this disease.

Early diagnosis is the only hope when cancer attacks an organ as vital as the lung. Thus, it is terribly unfortunate that in the beginning, when the growth is small, X-ray examination usually shows nothing abnormal.

Persistent Cough

An irritating and persistent cough, however, develops early. Sometimes, blood is brought up and there may also be some wheezing. Hence, it is of great importance that anyone showing signs of continuing disorder of the lungs have special examinations made to determine whether or not cancer is present.

One of these involves the use of the bronchoscope, an instrument made up of a tube with lights that can be passed into the lung. A bit of tissue can be removed through the bronchoscope and examined under a microscope to determine if cancer is present.

Once a diagnosis of lung cancer is made, immediate operation is advisable in most cases. X-ray and radium treatments may also be of some help.

The symptoms of cancer of the lung are due to irritation and destruction of a bronchus which is one of the large tubes of the lungs. As the growth enlarges, the air passage will be blocked, and there will be stretching of the air sacs in the lung, called emphysema. There may also be some collapse of the lung tissue, called atelectasis.

As the cancer invades more and more of the lung tissue, more severe symptoms develop such as pain, the coughing up of large amounts of sputum, and loss of weight.

By this time it may, of course, be too late to do much for the patient. Not only will a great deal of the lung have been destroyed by the widespread growth, but cells from this original cancer may have traveled through the blood stream to the brain or spinal cord, setting up new malignancies there.

This process of sending out new colonies of cancer cells to other locations is known as metastasis. It may occur with almost any cancer but is especially likely in cancer of the lung.

This is the dreadful course of this dreadful disease and nothing could emphasize more strongly the urgent need for its early discovery or bring home more forcibly the fact that anyone who suffers from a persistent cough should lose no time in consulting a doctor.

READING DURING BIDDING

CARD READING during the bidding can pay just as great dividends as during the play, sometimes much more. If the opponents are bidding against you, for instance, and one of them fails to support a call by his partner in a major suit, of which you yourself are short, you can automatically place a fair number of that suit in your partner's hand. That makes your partner unlikely to hold very many cards in some other suit in which you hold length. Such being the case, beware of a misfit.

South should have been duly fearful of a misfit from the moment he saw his freak hand. Such a holding can be powerful if your partner fits either suit, but disastrous when stuck with one like North's.

Even with nothing special developing in the bidding, South would have been wise to bid a minimum 3-Clubs on his second turn instead of the power-showing single jump to 4-Clubs. North would have shown a mere preference at 3-Diamonds, whereupon South might have tried 4-Diamonds to see if North was interested in game. He would have been down about one trick not doubled.

With East, however, bidding hearts and West failing to support the suit, there was a great chance that North had fairly long hearts. North had already bid spades, so a goodly number of his cards could have been placed by South in the majors. That should have warned South to go extra slow. His 4-Clubs, instead of a mere three, was grossly unparadigmatic in these circumstances.

In the 5-Diamonds doubled, South got set two tricks, and could have been beaten worse by better defense than his opponents put up against him.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

THE NIGHT of the accident, Barry was at Hagney's Hagney and his wife lived in a cluttered flat over the antique shop. Above them was another apartment, rented to a family with three children. It was always noisy at Hagney's and usually exciting. Abby was doing Nurse's Aide. She was generally home by ten.

At nine Barry left and walked home through the March night, which felt more like May, cool after the day's heat, and very like spring. The telephone was ringing furiously when he entered. He answered it, and heard a voice, almost unrecognizable. "Barry? ... This is Craig Emerson. ... There's been an accident ..."

"To whom?" asked Barry. "What happened?"

"Val was driving," said Craig. "She isn't hurt, just shaken up ... Jay Morris has a broken leg ... Uncle Norman's pretty badly hurt. I think Abby had better come. We're waiting for the doctor now."

Barry said, "I'll get the first train ... I haven't a car, and Madge is away. Abby's at the hospital. No need for her to come unless it's serious. ... I'll leave a note for her. ... And then call her, from your place."

He hung up, went to the desk, scribbled a note, standing. He ended, "Don't worry. ... Craig's an old woman; it's probably just a bruise or sprain. I'll phone you ... sit tight until I do ..."

He went out and was lucky. A cruising taxi passed, stopped, and took him to the station. He had three minutes to catch a train. He caught it, and it was an express. At the Fairport station he got a cab and drove to the Wallace place. There were no cars in the driveway, but the house blazed with light; the front door was open and he walked in.

Mrs. Renning came out of the dining room. She looked harried. She said, in a whisper, "I'm so glad you came, Mr. Lambert. They've taken Mr. Morris to the hospital. ... Mr. Wallace refused to be moved."

Craig appeared on the stairs. He looked, Barry perceived, pale and anxious, but brisk. He came downstairs quickly. He said, "I'm glad you didn't bring Abby, after all. It's all right. Uncle Norman wouldn't go to the hospital with Jay. There's nothing very wrong. He's shaken, of course, has some bruises, and a cut or two. He threw everyone except me out of the room. A nurse is coming presently. I'll stay with him till she gets here."

"Val?"
"Oh, she's all right," said Craig carelessly. Evidently Val, too, had been thrown out of her husband's room, and Craig was pleased. "She always did drive like a bat of hell," he said conversationally. "They'd gone to the library board meeting, at the Uphams, that's between here and Bluehill. Coming back she took a corner and hit a parked truck. It's a miracle that no one was killed. Sorry I didn't wait till tomorrow to call you ... if you want to get back on the next train you can make it. I'll send you down."

Barry said, "Thanks, I'll take a look, if you don't mind, and then call Abby. I left a note, and promised I would."

"Just as you wish," said Craig. He added, "I'll go back up now. He's had a sedative, but you can look in on him. The doctor has left. He went with the ambulance. He'll be back, though."

The room was dark except for the bedside light. Norman Wallace lay in the great bed. His color looked all right to Barry, he breathed evenly as if he slept. A head bandage made him look stylishly rakish.

He opened his eyes. He said, "Well, Barry?"

Barry stood beside the bed, looking down. He said, "Sorry, sir ... but glad you're no worse off."

"I'm tough," said Wallace. "Have you seen Valentine?"

"Not yet."

"Do. She's upset. I wanted her mother to come up and stay with her, but she wouldn't have it. Is Abby here?"

Barry said, "She was at the hospital. ... I didn't want to alarm her too much. I left a note. I'll phone her directly."

"Tell her that I'm all right." He closed his eyes, dismissing his son-in-law. Craig said softly, "Val's in her room. I believe."

Barry left the room, closing the door carefully. Val's door was shut. He knocked and she said quickly, "Who is it?"

"Barry."

She opened the door and stood looking at him. She was white under her year-round tan. She wore, attractively, not much of anything. There was a bruise on her cheek and one wrist was strapped. She asked, "Where's Abby?"

"At home." He explained. "Mind if I phone?"

There was a big room, too, and very lovely. Val had refurbished it, and it became her. Near the chaise longue where she had been lying the telephone stood on a small table. Barry picked it up and gave his number. Waiting, he looked at Val. She had gone back to the chaise longue. There was a highball glass half empty on the table, an ash tray full of half-smoked cigarettes. On the hearth a small fire whispered comfortably against the little chill of the night. There were flowers in the room, photographs, the odor of perfume.

"Oh, she's all right," said Barry, "but my father-in-law is an intelligent character. He will know that fortunate girls don't risk their beautiful necks running into trucks deliberately."

"Craig Emerson would do anything to get me out of this house," she said. She took her hands from her face and looked at him. The tears dried in the heat of anger. She added, "And I wish I was out of it."

Val said grimly, "I'll stay."

She set down the glass he had put in her hand. She said, "You might as well have a drink, too. Keep it here?" he asked, mildly amused.

"Well, no," she said, annoyed, "but there's a tray somewhere ... and glasses."

Barry found the tray, the bottles, the ice and a glass.

History of Virginia Is Monday Club Topic

Mrs. Hays, Mrs. Ulm Present Papers At Meeting

In the discussion of the Monday club topic for the year "Your Land and Mine", the history of Virginia, was selected as the subject for this week's program with Mrs. A. Hulse Hays presenting a paper entitled "Tidewater Virginia" and Mrs. W. T. Ulm, one on "Williamsburg".

Following the presentation of the two papers the members heard the final report on the decoration of the club room by Mrs. Frank J. Bennett, chairman of the committee. Mrs. T. L. Huston presided was in charge of the meeting and named Miss Florence Hoffman, Mrs. Dudley Carpenter and Mrs. W. T. Ulm a committee for the student aid fund project.

Mrs. Clark Hunsicker and Mrs. N. L. Cochran were named delegates to the South East district club conference which will be held October 15 in Lancaster.

Miss Jane Mader was named corresponding secretary during the absence of Mrs. Carl Kennedy.

To open the program, Mrs. Clark Will led the members in singing a stanza of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia".

In presenting her paper, Mrs. Hays said the colonization of America by the English was a direct result of the struggle between England under Elizabeth and the kingdom of Spain under Philip II for the control of the then known world.

On April 26, 1607 three small English vessels sailed into a bay known now as Chesapeake with the right "to inhabit and possess all remote lands in the new world not in actual possession of the Christian Prince, and name the land Virginia." The expedition was sponsored by The London Company, a trading corporation, of London merchants.

The explorers named the settlement Jamestown. In a year, a fort was built as well as a chapel, a market place, a store house, a guard house and a number of homes. By 1619, the colonists were allowed to set up a representative assembly.

By the middle of the 17th century Tidewater, Virginia society was divided into three classes, a small privileged group, a large yeoman group who became the middle class, and the indentured servant. The wooded banks of the James, the York, the Rappahannock and the Potomac were their settlements.

Slavery brought the plantation way of life and tobacco proved to be gold found in Virginia. The people were and still are country loving people. The towns were few and each plantation was a self contained city. This was the "Golden Age of Tidewater".

Education of the masses were frowned on by church and state. Governor Berkeley thanked God that there were no free schools in the colony.

On the banks of the James there are still some plantation homes. The Byrd home, the Carter's, the Harrison's, Wm. Henry and Benjamin and Nathaniel Bacon's houses are still standing. These homes are now show places and opened to the public during Virginia Garden Week which is usually the last week of April.

On the banks of the Potomac, find George Washington's beloved Mt. Vernon, Arlington, Robert E. Lee's home, and Gunston Hall, the home of George Mason, the author of the Bill of Rights of our Constitution.

These homes were described somewhat in detail by Mrs. Hays who further asserted that at least fifty of Virginia's colonial church buildings are standing today. Some have survived while others have been restored. One of the few surviving wooden churches is St. Johns in Richmond where Patrick Henry made his famous speech. The ruins of the first church in Jamestown stand partially restored. Here in the choir loft was held the first meeting of the Virginia House of Burgesses.

In the discussion of her paper, Mrs. Ulm said, "Williamsburg, which nestles between the James and the York rivers, is in one of the most historic sections of our country."

Williamsburg began as "Middle Plantation", an outpost of civilization. It became the capital of Virginia in 1699 and the name was changed to Williamsburg in honor of William III of England. The place was palisaded against the Indians and a building code for the buildings of the new capital established. Conformity in architecture and a unity of plans for garden fences and street lamps contributed to a charming place. The Duke of Gloucester was the name of the principal street. At one end, William and Mary College was located while at the other end of the street the capital buildings were built. William and Mary is the second oldest college in the United States. It is the Alma Mater of Thomas Jefferson, James Tyler, James Monroe and Edmund Randolph. George Washington took his examination for county surveyor under a mathematician at William and Mary. The Phi Beta Kappa idea originated at this college.

Raleigh Tavern is often called The Cradle of Liberty for here trooped members of The House of Burgesses because the Royal governor had dissolved that body of men.

After the capital was removed to Richmond and fires destroyed so much of Williamsburg, the lovely colonial town was neglected. However, one of the historic places that remained in use was Bruton church. The church where George Washington, Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, John Tyler and James Monroe had worshipped. Today, this historic shrine is like a national cathedral.

Through the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the city was restored to its colonial grandeur. The restoration process was started in 1925 and today the city is a living community that links the

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

The decision left in some confusion and doubt, however, the point of whether a military man can be hung merely for conducting a war. Two German generals and two admirals were found guilty, apparently not of violating military codes, but of some kind of political responsibility for having been Hitler's military leaders. Take the case of Gen. Jodl who was probably the military brain of Hitler. The decision claimed only that he planned the attack on Czechoslovakia, Norway, Greece and Yugoslavia and burned the houses of people in Norway. He was ordered hanged because "there was nothing in mitigation." A military planning of attacks has never been considered a crime, (they exist today in all war department archives) but the burning of homes might be a crime if it was a violation of military necessity and custom. If so it should be tried by a German courtmartial.

Yet the judges tried to make it clear in other remarks that they did not want to establish a precedent of trying military men for doing their patriotic duty. The suggestion was offered that Jodl and Keitel, as well as Doenitz and Raeder were somehow politically intertwined with Hitler beyond the necessity of military duty. Under this kind of confusing verdict, I suppose our own generals could be absolved for planning campaigns in future wars (if they won) while the Russian generals who are politically intertwined in Communism might be convicted of crime (if they lost).

Card Catcher Sparks Red Birds To 3-0 Win

CATCHER DEL RICE of the St. Louis Cardinals looks on in the first and winning run of the second World Series game played in St. Louis. Rice is shown scoring on Pitcher Harry Brecheen's single to right field. Brecheen shut out the Boston Red Sox allowing but four hits. Card Bat Boy Scanlan and Second Baseman Red Schoendienst welcome Rice at the plate. Umpire Cal Hubbard looks on.

SOX AND CARDS HAPPY AS THEY TRAVEL EAST

Cards Sure They Can Win Following Brecheen's Shutout Job

BY LEO H. PETERSON
United Press Sports Editor

ABOARD WORLD SERIES SPECIAL ENROUTE TO BOSTON, Oct. 8—The Red Sox and the Cardinals, leaving Sportsman's Park in St. Louis where they split the first two games, headed for Boston's Fenway park today for the third game of the World Series.

And there wasn't anything but joy riding with them.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, hoping for the best, figured that the vaunted power which his team showed as it swept to the American League pennant would assert itself again once his boys got back home.

Eddie Dyer, the boss of the Cardinals, was just as sure that his Red Birds, having proved that they belong in the same park with the Red Sox, would continue to do as well away from home as they did in their home grounds.

Dyer nominated little Murry Dickson, a righthander with a lot of stuff, to go after that vital third game tomorrow while Cronin banked on Davis (Boo) Ferris, who won 25 games for him this season.

It was in Fenway park where the Red Sox won their pennant. They were terrorists-plus on their own diamond in contrast to the Cardinals' record. The Red Birds didn't do too well at home during the regular season but once they got into enemy territory they exploded with the class that brought them the National League pennant after a playoff against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Dickson won the game which gave the Cards the pennant, beating the Dodgers with the aid of Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, the brilliant southpaw of the Red Birds who got his team back on even terms yesterday as he shut out the Cronin men on four hits, all of them singles, to win 3 to 0.

Dyer was expecting him to take up where Brecheen left off.

The Cards may not win at Boston, but they proved to a lot of skeptics that they had a lot of class. It may not be enough to win the series, but no matter what happens from here on out they've let the Red Sox know that they're meeting a tough ball club.

Although he wasn't at all unhappy, Cronin, who had cautioned from the start that the Cards were going to be rough to beat, was confident that Ferriss, one of the greatest pitchers to come up in years, would do all right before the home folks. Under normal circumstances he would have pitched the youthful right hander yesterday, but decided he could afford to gamble since big Tex Hughson won the opening game for him. So Cronin held him back, figuring he might go better before the home folks.

The gamble turned out to be a bad one. For Mickey Harris, although he hurled good ball, lost to the curving masterpiece which Brecheen came up with.

There have been few World Series games in which a pitcher dominated the play to the extent that Brecheen did yesterday. He used his arm to keep the Red Sox away from the plate and his hat to account for the only run he needed to win.

That came in the third inning when his single scored Del Rice, who in his first time at bat in a World Series game had fielded a double down the left field line.

DOC BLANCHARD READY FOR MICHIGAN CONTEST

NEW YORK, Oct. 8—For the first time in three weeks, the Army football team had the use today of its famed fullback, Felix (Doc) Blanchard, with assurance that he has completely recovered from a knee injury and will be fit for Saturday's game with Michigan.

"He could have played against Cornell if we had needed him," said Lt. Bob Anderson, assistant coach of the undefeated Cadets, "but after we got three touchdowns in the first period, we didn't have to risk using him. An extra week's rest will put him in great shape for Michigan—and we'll certainly need him there."
